

Great Australian Bight

By Max. M

Facts

- The Great Australian Bight is said to have loads of oil kilometres under the sand, BP offered to mine it but it is risky because back in 2010 81 million barrels of oil was spilt into the Gulf of Mexico's shores.
- The Bight is home to an amazing array of marine life, including many threatened and endangered species: great white sharks, humpback, blue and southern right whales, southern blue-fin tuna, Australian sea lions, white-bellied sea eagle and albatross. Including many more.
- The bight is defined as a nursery ground for these whales and they are home to colonies of endangered sea lions.
- The great Australian Bight area is a tourist attraction, including fisheries and coastal communities.
