

An aerial photograph of a rural Polish landscape. The foreground and middle ground are dominated by a patchwork of agricultural fields in various stages of growth, showing shades of green, yellow, and brown. A large, leafy tree stands prominently on the right side. In the background, a small village with several houses and a church is visible, nestled in a valley. The overall scene is bathed in warm, golden light, suggesting late afternoon or early morning.

Roztocze

- Roztocze is a range of hills in east-central Poland and western Ukraine which rises from the Lublin Upland and extends southeastward through Solska Wilderness and across the border into Ukrainian Podolia. Low and rolling, the range is approximately 180 km long and 14 km wide. Its highest peak within Poland is Wielki Dział at 390 meters, while in Ukraine it is at 409 m. In Poland Roztocze lies in Wysokyi Zamok (Lviv High Castle) the Lublin and Podkarpackie voivodships, while the portion in Ukraine extends all the way to the outskirts of Lviv. In 2011 UNESCO established the Roztochya Biosphere Reserve. The Polish portion of the range makes up the Roztocze National Park.
